THE INTRODUCTION OF THE CORRUPTION ACT

The Corruption Act 1998, which was passed by the House of Commons on 11th July 1998, replaced the Prevention of Bribery Act 1916, which had been in force for 82 years. The new Act was a comprehensive and far-reaching reform of the law relating to corruption in the United Kingdom. It was a landmark piece of legislation, and it was widely regarded as a major step forward in the fight against corruption.

The Act was introduced by the Home Office, and it was sponsored by the then Home Secretary, Jack Straw.

The Act was a response to a long-standing problem in the United Kingdom. The law relating to corruption had been outdated and ineffective for many years. It was widely regarded as a major barrier to the development of a more transparent and accountable public sector.
