The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions. It emphasizes that every sale, purchase, and transfer must be properly documented to ensure transparency and accountability. This includes recording the date, amount, and purpose of each transaction, as well as the names of the parties involved.

Furthermore, the document outlines the procedures for handling disputes and claims. It states that any disagreements should be resolved through a fair and equitable process, taking into account the interests of all parties. The goal is to reach a mutually satisfactory resolution as quickly as possible to avoid unnecessary legal costs and delays.

In addition, the document provides guidelines for the management of assets and liabilities. It advises that all assets should be properly valued and recorded, and that liabilities should be accurately tracked and reported. This information is crucial for the preparation of financial statements and for making informed decisions about the organization's financial health.

Finally, the document concludes by reiterating the commitment to integrity and ethical conduct. It encourages all employees and stakeholders to adhere to the highest standards of honesty and transparency in all business dealings. By doing so, the organization can build trust and maintain a strong reputation in the marketplace.

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased in the UK (Mental Health Act 1983).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a strategy for mental health care in the UK. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals and not as a group.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care and treatment.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to live in their own homes and communities.

The strategy also sets out a number of objectives for the future, including:

- To reduce the number of people with mental health problems who are admitted to hospital.
- To improve the quality of care and treatment for people with mental health problems.
- To improve the support and services available to people with mental health problems.

The strategy is a long-term plan and will be reviewed regularly. It is a framework for action and will be supported by a number of other initiatives, including:

- The development of new services and treatments.
- The improvement of existing services and treatments.
- The training of health professionals in mental health care.

The strategy is a commitment to the people with mental health problems and to the public. It is a commitment to a better future for all.
