

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

[REDACTED]

THEORY

The first part of the paper discusses the theoretical background of the study. It starts with a general introduction to the concept of organizational commitment, which is defined as a psychological attachment to an organization that results in a voluntary identification with and acceptance of its goals and policies. This is followed by a discussion of the different dimensions of organizational commitment, including affective, normative, and calculative commitment.

The second part of the paper discusses the theoretical background of the study. It starts with a general introduction to the concept of organizational commitment, which is defined as a psychological attachment to an organization that results in a voluntary identification with and acceptance of its goals and policies. This is followed by a discussion of the different dimensions of organizational commitment, including affective, normative, and calculative commitment.

The third part of the paper discusses the theoretical background of the study. It starts with a general introduction to the concept of organizational commitment, which is defined as a psychological attachment to an organization that results in a voluntary identification with and acceptance of its goals and policies. This is followed by a discussion of the different dimensions of organizational commitment, including affective, normative, and calculative commitment.

The fourth part of the paper discusses the theoretical background of the study. It starts with a general introduction to the concept of organizational commitment, which is defined as a psychological attachment to an organization that results in a voluntary identification with and acceptance of its goals and policies. This is followed by a discussion of the different dimensions of organizational commitment, including affective, normative, and calculative commitment.

The fifth part of the paper discusses the theoretical background of the study. It starts with a general introduction to the concept of organizational commitment, which is defined as a psychological attachment to an organization that results in a voluntary identification with and acceptance of its goals and policies. This is followed by a discussion of the different dimensions of organizational commitment, including affective, normative, and calculative commitment.

The sixth part of the paper discusses the theoretical background of the study. It starts with a general introduction to the concept of organizational commitment, which is defined as a psychological attachment to an organization that results in a voluntary identification with and acceptance of its goals and policies. This is followed by a discussion of the different dimensions of organizational commitment, including affective, normative, and calculative commitment.

The seventh part of the paper discusses the theoretical background of the study. It starts with a general introduction to the concept of organizational commitment, which is defined as a psychological attachment to an organization that results in a voluntary identification with and acceptance of its goals and policies. This is followed by a discussion of the different dimensions of organizational commitment, including affective, normative, and calculative commitment.

The eighth part of the paper discusses the theoretical background of the study. It starts with a general introduction to the concept of organizational commitment, which is defined as a psychological attachment to an organization that results in a voluntary identification with and acceptance of its goals and policies. This is followed by a discussion of the different dimensions of organizational commitment, including affective, normative, and calculative commitment.

CHAPTER 10

1. The first part of the chapter discusses the importance of the first impression and how it can be made. It also discusses the importance of the first impression and how it can be made.

2. The second part of the chapter discusses the importance of the first impression and how it can be made. It also discusses the importance of the first impression and how it can be made.

3. The third part of the chapter discusses the importance of the first impression and how it can be made. It also discusses the importance of the first impression and how it can be made.

4. The fourth part of the chapter discusses the importance of the first impression and how it can be made. It also discusses the importance of the first impression and how it can be made.

[Illegible text]

[Illegible text]

[Illegible text]

[Illegible text]

[Illegible text]

[Illegible text]