Abstract This study examined the relationship between intergenerational support and well-being of older adults. Data were drawn from the 1990 National Longitudinal Survey of Aging.

Keywords: intergenerational support, well-being, older adults, family support, social support

Older adults are often dependent on family members for support and care. This support is often provided by adult children, but it can also be provided by other family members, such as grandchildren and siblings.

Intergenerational support is the support that is provided by family members across generations. This support can be provided by adult children, but it can also be provided by other family members, such as grandchildren and siblings.

the 1990s, the number of people with a disability in the United States has increased by 50% (U.S. Census Bureau 2000).

As a result of the increase in the number of people with disabilities, the need for accessible information has become more acute. The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) of 1990 (Public Law 101-504) has provided a legal framework for the development of accessible information. The ADA requires that information be accessible to people with disabilities, and that the information be presented in a format that is accessible to people with disabilities.

The ADA also requires that information be accessible to people with disabilities in a format that is accessible to people with disabilities.
